

CHAMBERLAIN TELLS COMMONS WAR DANGER HAS NOT RECEDED; LITTLE CHANGE IN SITUATION

Germany Optimistic for Peace Negotiations — Prospect of Immediate War Fades As Hitler Carefully Ponders Great Britain's Answer to a Settlement

By International News Service

Developments today in the international situation: LONDON—Members of parliament assembled to hear a statement by Prime Minister Chamberlain after Britain's proposal to Germany that Danzig be made a free state under joint German-Polish control.

BERLIN—Germany was optimistic for peace negotiations, as the press urged Britain and France to compel Poland to surrender the corridor.

WARSAW—Seven were killed in a bomb explosion which wrecked a railroad station at Tarnow, and one German and one German-born Pole were arrested.

PARIS—New pre-war measures were ordered as thousands evacuated Paris.

ROME—Italy heard that Britain asked partial German-Polish demobilization.

WASHINGTON—Official quarters saw possibility of a "liberal" interpretation of the neutrality act to permit belligerent nations to acquire war materials already ordered from American firms.

LONDON, Aug. 29—"I cannot say the danger of war has receded," Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today.

The Prime Minister addressed the specially summoned parliament on the situation brought about by his dispatch of a new communication to Hitler, urging peaceful negotiations of Europe's crisis. Revealing that the entire British Navy and air force had been placed in readiness for war, Chamberlain said that the whole issue hinged on the nature of a reply that Hitler is now drafting.

"There has been little change in the situation since the House last met," Chamberlain said, "but I cannot say that the danger of war has receded. It is once more necessary to urge the press to exercise utmost restraint at this time."

"There has been no change in the policy of His Majesty's Government." This statement was greeted with thunderous cheers. "As I said last Thursday catastrophe is not yet upon us."

"But it is quite possible that a few thoughtless words in a newspaper might wreck the whole effort being made by His Majesty's government to obtain a satisfactory solution."

Great Britain's "final answer" to Hitler's note demanding return of Danzig and the Polish corridor "was handed to him last night," Chamberlain said. He indicated that he had no intention of publishing the text of the note immediately.

BERLIN, Aug. 29—Prospects of immediate war in Europe faded today as Hitler carefully pondered Great Britain's answer to his settlement proposal with the aim of drafting his own rejoinder in such a manner that the road to peaceful solution remains wide open.

The above information was gathered by this correspondent from most reliable quarters. It can be definitely stated that a "way out" is now accepted as a possible alternative to war, but a means of settling the issue at stake has not yet been found, with Hitler insisting that Britain and France must discover a way of cutting the Gordian knot.

With Field Marshal Goering and Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, the Fuehrer lengthily studied all implications of the note handed in at the Chancellery late last night, by British Chancellor Sir Neville Henderson. It was hoped that Hitler's reply will be ready to transmit to London through Henderson by night-fall.

LONDON, Aug. 29—(INS)—Two plans, one British, one Italian—neither of which would cede Danzig outright to Germany—were under consideration in the chancelleries of Europe today as Adolf Hitler held back his fighting forces to weigh the latest London formula.

Great Britain, it was learned, went a long way towards meeting Chancellor Hitler's terms, but delivered to the Fuehrer a flat negative to his demands for immediate cession of Danzig and the Polish Corridor.

Not even the settlement put forward by Premier Mussolini of Italy suggested that the Corridor be given back to Germany.

The British scheme carried back to Hitler by Sir Neville Henderson, the ambassador to Germany, included these points, it was understood:

1.—Danzig, with an additional strip of territory, is to remain a free state but be under the protection of Germany and Poland, its independence to be guaranteed by Britain, France, Poland, and Germany.

2.—Free government and free electoral rights are to be granted to Danzig citizens.

3.—Customs of the Free State are to be divided evenly between Poland and Danzig. (Poland now controls Danzig's customs.)

4.—Germany and Poland should share the port equally.

5.—Poland will lease a road across

Invites Penna. Residents To New York World's Fair

Senator Howard I. James today made public a communication he received requesting him to extend an invitation to his constituents to make the Pennsylvania Building at the New York World's Fair their headquarters when visiting the exhibition.

The text of the letter given out by Senator James reads:

The Honorable Howard I. James, 117 Radcliffe Street, Bristol, Pennsylvania.

My dear Mr. James:

As a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature you are, I know, vitally interested in the Pennsylvania Exhibit at the New York World's Fair, and of its acceptance.

Will you be kind enough to extend an invitation to all those from your district who are planning a trip to the Fair, to make the Pennsylvania Building their headquarters. To those who have, as yet, no thought of going to the Fair won't you mention the fact that our building will give them a magnificent conception of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as a whole, and the Fair itself will give them a wonderful picture of the world today.

Hoping to have the pleasure of seeing you at the Fair and at our building, believe me,

Very sincerely yours,
JOSEPHINE POSTER BRIGHT,
Assistant General Manager.

HERE TO ATTEND FUNERAL

Mrs. Mary Cuccarese, Philip Cuccarese, Joseph Cuccarese, Mrs. David Virgalitto, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cuccarese and Mrs. Joseph Beraduce, of Youngstown, Ohio; and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Alexander, Washington, D. C., are in Bristol to attend the funeral of the late Nicola Cuccarese.

More About Those Movies

(By "The Stroller")

James Dolan, Pine street, says that J. Leslie Kilcoyne was right in stating that the first motion picture show in Bristol was given at the site of the present Kilcoyne office, 505 Bath street. "But as Mr. Kilcoyne was not certain of the date I can give information on that. It was not 1905 or 1906 as he was of the opinion, but the show was in either 1907 or 1908.

"The pictures were run by John Hunter," adds Dolan "and the late Charles (Chick) Waters sang at the opening performance."

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Steve Arcade, of East State street, Doylestown, is proud of having the only fig tree in town bearing a big crop of fruit. Some of the figs were eaten and enjoyed by friends of Steve and he says he expects to get at least two bushels from the tree.

The tree grew from a branch planted about eight years ago. Limbs from it have since been planted on other properties, and are thriving.

The Arcade tree is over 12 feet high and the fruit from it is perfect and has a delicious flavor.

On Thanksgiving day it will have its winter protection placed over it—newspapers, with boards for walls and glass sash for the top.

With only one more week remaining, Morrisville's playgrounds near the end of their most successful season.

An average of 150 boys and girls of the borough attended daily the games at the William E. Case School campus and the Island Park site, under supervision of John W. Hoffman and his WPA assistants. The playgrounds were sponsored by the P. T. A., with assistance of the education and recreation departments of the WPA.

Activity this coming week will be informal, as the league seasons in softball and baseball have concluded. The club captained by Eugene Nowinski won the boys' softball league, while David Seltzer's baseball team won honors in that division. Three hikes were taken by the boys and the group attended a major league baseball contest in Philadelphia. Arts and crafts attracted 18 boys, who completed beautiful belts and other handicraft items. The younger boys and girls attended the Case School sessions, under supervision of Miss Sackett, where weaving featured. Henry Stewart and Frank Groves assisted at the Island Park sessions.

A fine winter program is being planned and will start as soon as the school gets underway.

With six of the 13 Plumstead township school teachers in attendance, the Plumsteadville Grange on Friday evening gave them a reception in the grange hall, with an attendance of about 60 members.

The six guests of honor, all of whom made contributions to the program, included Mrs. Carol Nyce, Mrs. Elsie Gill, Mrs. Mary Hinkle, Mrs. Ethel Hinkle, Mrs. Alma Myers and Mrs. George Gehman.

Three Plumstead township school directors, Newberry Myers, George Gehman and Isaac Gross, also were present.

Mrs. Nyce and Mrs. Gill presented two piano duets, and Mrs. Alma Myers presented a reading, "Your Best For Success." Mrs. Mary Hinkle was in charge of a shoe finding contest.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

No Time For Such Talk

August 28. IN a period such as this when the menace of a catastrophic war hangs frighteningly over the world, discussion of domestic policies, issues and individuals, except as they pertain to that menace, shrivel in importance—and they should. With civilization itself seemingly at stake, it appears singularly ignominious to keep such things partially in mind.

FACED with so appalling a prospect, they are puny and trivial beyond words. The vital national need in this situation is that the foreign policy of the country should be handled wisely and without thought of politics or

Mrs. Ethel Hinkle, and Mrs. Gehman presented a talk on an ice mine, located near Coudersport.

Short talks were given by the three directors, and also by John Graver, Tinticum township director.

Miss Elsie Stealy, a Durham township school teacher, gave a recitation, "Children," and the songs "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes," "Smile, Smile, Smile," and "Marching With the Heroes" were the musical numbers of the program.

Miss Ruth Crouthamel, who presided as the lecturer, announced that the grange picnic will be held at Ralph Stover State Park on Saturday, September 2, when a basket lunch will be held at noon and in the evening.

The first and second degree initiation ceremony will be held at the next meeting, September 8, when Tyro Hall Grange will stage the degree work.

Miss Crouthamel, who attended the lecturers' conference at State College, recently, will give a report.

TWO SCOUTS TRAVEL 1302 AT A COST OF ONLY $3.45

Croydon and Morrisville Youths Have Enjoyable Hitch-Hiking Journey

CLIMB SOME MOUNTAINS

CROYDON, Aug. 29—Two Boy Scouts, John Welsh, 14, of Croydon, and Robert Doyle, 16, of Morrisville, have completed a 1,302 mile hitch-hiking trip, which required 15 days. The two recent interesting and unusual experiences on this journey.

The first stop was in Holland, Pa., where they pitched their tent on the lawn of a resident, who told them of the lives and customs of the people in Holland of the old country. Continuing to Hershey, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton, they were delayed for a time by a land-slide. To Binghamton and the Finger Lakes section of New York state they continued, staying one night at Lake Canandaigua's woodland surroundings.

At Niagara Falls they visited the power house, then crossed into Canada, but were not permitted to remain because the joint sum of money amounted to but $1.57. Going on to Rochester they were twice given "lifts" by honeymooners, and reached Elmira where they gave aid in an automobile accident, in which four persons had been killed.

Again passing through Binghamton they reached Albany, and through the Catskill Mountains to Kingston, climbing four mountains during a three-day period. The two reached the summit of "Slide Mountain," 4,292 feet. Reaching the top they slept in a cave, and the next morning state they found porcupine quills in their blankets.

At Crum Elbow they viewed Father Divine's headquarters, and glimpsed the home of President Roosevelt at Hyde Park.

In exchange for cleaning the garden for one woman during their trek, the boys were given a night's lodging and meals, starting off with a large box of lunch.

John and Robert report the trip cost them $3.45.

Quits Milk Commission

Harrisburg, Aug. 29—Howard G. Elsaman resigned as chairman of the State Milk Control Commission today, in protest against Governor James' policy in milk control. Elsaman, a resident of Erie county, indicated in his letter of resignation to the governor, that he will leave his job September 1st, but he will continue his membership on the Commission until September 16th. He explained to the chief executive he was unable to agree in "what is now your very apparent policy and program in milk control."

Elsaman clashed yesterday with the Governor over the recent Commission order reducing the price per hundred-weight to producers in the Harrisburg area, while increasing the price of milk per quart.

Bremen Delayed

New York, Aug. 29—To the surprise and consternation of German officials, an unexpected ruling from the U. S. Treasury Department at Washington held the huge North German Lloyd liner Bremen in New York Port today hours after the time she was to have departed for Germany carrying only her crew.

Ordinarily, the granting of clearance papers is a formality quickly dispensed with. But the Bremen was denied the necessary order for departure until Treasury Department inspectors can board the ship this morning and make a detailed inspection.

The Bremen arrived in New York late yesterday afternoon, quickly discharged its 1,689 passengers and a cargo of 200 tons, and made immediate preparations to return to Germany empty save for the crew. The crew worked under floodlights last night to refuel and re-provision the huge vessel, so that it could leave before dawn.

But when German officials went to the Custom House yesterday evening for the clearance papers they were informed that because of orders from Washington the papers could not be granted.

"We were told that a new ruling had been made in Washington apparently affecting only the ships of our company," said Capt. William Drechsel, North German Lloyd Marine Superintendent.

BUCKS PROTHONOTARY IS ATTACKED BY BULL

Ezra Miller Has Broken Pelvis; Is In Hospital in Trenton, N. J.

KNOCKED TO GROUND

The prothonotary of Bucks County, Ezra Miller, Newtown Township, is in St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, N. J., suffering with a broken pelvis.

Mr. Miller on Friday morning went to the barn and was about to lead the bull from his stall when the snap on the staff slipped and broke. This set the bull free which at once attacked Miller. Mr. Miller was tossed about the stall and knocked down. He called for help and his son and grandson went to his assistance.

It is presumed that Mr. Miller was injured either when he was thrown to the ground or else the pressure of the bull's head against him caused the fracture.

It is said that the injury is not serious.

WAR CREDITS HERE

The British owned about $975,000,000 in American securities and about $245,000,000 in American short-term credits in 1936, according to a recently published Brookings Institution survey. Since 1936 the figure on securities has probably risen to about $1,300,000,000, bringing the total of securities and credits to about $1,545,000,000. In addition, Britishers have about $675,000,000 invested directly in American property. But much of this investment represents oil wells and gasoline stations, mines, insurance companies, and similar properties which could not very readily be liquidated.

Canadians hold about $1,000,000,000 in American securities and $185,000,000 in short-term credits. The extent to which these would go into a war melting pot would depend on the amount of co-operation Canada would give the mother country in case of war. The direct Canadian investment in the United States, largely railroads, is estimated at about $367,000,000. The combined British and Canadian holdings of American securities is about 44 per cent of the total foreign holdings of $5,270,000,000.

The British holdings of American securities are now much less than before the war of 1914. The pre-war British holdings have been estimated at $3,700,000,000, par value. By the end of 1919 about $2,000,000,000 of this amount had been sold. Very little of the direct British investment in American properties changed hands.

The total American exports (mostly British-financed) to the Allies between the outbreak of war in 1914 and the entrance of the United States were valued at $7,000,000,000. So the British financed much less than one-half of their purchases here by selling American securities. They could get credit—for instance, from banking firms such as the Morgan company—because the bankers could float loans from which to make the credits good. Now the Johnson act forbids loan flotations by or for countries in arrears in war debt payments to the United States.

During the war Germany had trouble using American securities as basis for American loans, because the physical transfer was accompanied by danger. In several instances, American securities returning to this country and German bonds bought in this country were intercepted and confiscated. To acquire dollar exchange, Germany had to sell American securities outright, usually in neutral countries. It is believed that from $300,000,000 to $500,000,000 of German holdings of American securities—the great bulk of the total—were sold prior to the entrance of the United States in the war. Now German holdings of American securities are so negligible as not to be listed separately in the compilations. The French holdings, together with short-term credits, are estimated at about $500,000,000.

American securities owned by British in 1914 were largely gilt-edge railroad bonds. They could be sold at little sacrifice. Now the British holdings are largely common stocks. And wide liquidation of them would cause a severe drop in prices, especially since Americans would be apt to sell at the same time, so the value of the British holdings would be much less for liquidation than the present estimated value.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Jan. 24, 1878. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The following items were culled from the Bucks County Gazette, issue of January 24, 1878:

Post No. 73, G. A. R., held its first camp fire on Tuesday night, and so pleasant was the occasion that it will not be long before a repetition will be demanded. The comrades of the Post, with a few exceptions, all turned out and their numbers were augmented by a delegation of 14 from Post 71, of Frankford. After the usual muster in of recruits, the tables were spread with a bountiful supply of coffee and other good things to eat and drink, to which full justice was done.

The suspension of the running of coal on the Lehigh Valley, Lehigh and Susquehanna, Morris and Essex, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Easton and Amboy and Belvidere Delaware railroads has thrown over 600 men out of employment in Easton and Phillipsburg.

Yesterday the betting men of the community had an opportunity to indulge in a game of chance, in guessing the weight of a large hog which was killed at the Cottage Hotel. The estimates ran from 730 to 800 pounds, and when the animal was weighed, it brought down the scales at 733 pounds. Mr. Silbert, has another large hog which in a short time will be sacrificed, and furnish more work for the guessers.

About seven o'clock last evening, A. L. Garwood's house, corner of Wood and Dorrance streets, was discovered to be on fire, having caught on the roof from the chimney, where the fire originated. The alarm was sounded and the firemen turned out promptly with their apparatus, but the fire was extinguished without aid from the department.

Extra meetings continue at the Methodist Church. On Monday evening, Rev. W. H. Elliot, now stationed at Frankford, preached. Forty years ago, when Bristol was "on a circuit," Mr. Elliot was appointed to take charge, it being his first appointment. Tuesday evening, Rev. O. R. Cook, of Bensalem, preached.

The John A. Warner will be out this week if the moderate weather continues. Today is the time named for her appearance. It will be something remarkable to have the boat running in mid-Winter.

Rev. W. S. Perkins has sold his house at the corner of Dorrance and Cedar streets, to Charles W. Pelree, Jr., for $2,800.

Eighteen thousand pairs of shoes per week are said to be manufactured by our Burlington neighbors.

The flour dealers of Bristol have reduced the price of that article to consumers 25 cents per hundred.

LANGHORNE—Thomas Eastburn is about completing arrangements to print the "Beacon" by steam-power. A lyceum has been organized at the Friends school to meet once in two weeks. The colored folks also have a lyceum which was crowded at its meeting last Tuesday evening. They wrestled two weeks over the question of "whether fire or water was the most destructive," and the judges having decided in favor of water, they will next take up the momentous question, "Which has the greater influence over man, women or whiskey?"

WARMINSTER—At the spelling contest held at the Davisville Baptist Church, on Tuesday of last week, the first prize, "Pictorial United States," was won by Miss Ellie Yerkes, Southampton; second prize, "Avondale Lyceum," was won by Daniel Strawhacker, Southamptonville, and the third prize, "Self Culture," by Miss Annie Flood, Johnsville.

At the road view held at Ivyland, on Saturday last, to view and lay out a road from that place to Breadyville, the jury decided unfavorably.

NEW HOPE—Rev. Father Connolly, pastor of the St. John's Roman Catholic Church, of Lambertville, died at his residence on Sunday morning. On the Sunday previous, as he was officiating in his clerical capacity, he was taken ill, and conveyed to his home. He has been in poor health for some time.

PENSION EXILED GENERAL

HAVANA—(INS)—General Alberto Herrera, chief of Cuba's armed forces during the administration of the late President Machado, who was forced to flee into exile close behind his chief is entitled to a pension of $2,400 annually, according to a decision of the Audencia court of Havana. The pension is based on the fact Herrera was secretary of state for a few hours after Machado fled.

has been their chief concern.

WHEN the kind of load the outbreak would lay on the President is considered, one would think that the last thing his friends would want to do would be to speak or write a word calculated to stir political antagonism against him. One would think at this time they could agree that politics should be adjourned, and recognize that if a special session of Congress becomes necessary the worst possible thing for Mr. Roosevelt and for the country would be knowledge among members of Congress that there are men within the Administration anxious to capitalize the conflagration for their own and his political profit. That is not a pleasant thought, but since the present crisis developed there have been signs which make it inevitable.

CERTAINLY, it is a fact that some of the Administration "insiders" who recently have been depressed at the soggy state of their "draft Roosevelt" campaign are today twittering with excitement over the chance that a war in Europe will give it new life and vigor. The idea is that should war come the danger of our becoming involved and the demand for national unity would smother opposition and induce the country to acquiesce in another term. No one, of course, makes such an accusation against the President personally, but from their emanations of the last few days it almost would seem that he has some supporters to whom war would not be as unwelcome because of the belief that it would promote their "political objectives."

AMONG other things, it is worth noting that last Saturday, when there seemed no way to avoid the ultimate disaster, there appeared in a number of newspapers an article, clearly inspired by the "inner circle" boys, which utterly ignored the war prospect and dwelt with enthusiasm upon the way in which the "liberal" Western States were being rounded up for a third term by Mr. Tommy Corcoran and his aides. The assertion was made that Mr. Roosevelt's forthcoming Western trip is to be made the occasion for rallying third-term sentiment in the Pacific and Mountain States, and that the President's speeches are expected to enhance this sentiment.

PERHAPS it is inevitable that politicians should interpret every situation, no matter how dreadful, in terms of politics. But it is a little shocking that while the world holds its breath lest the ultimate calamity befall, New Deal politicians should discuss plans for the stimulation of their third-term movement as though there was not a cloud in the international sky. Better than anything else, it illustrates the character of a group which the New Deal brought out of obscurity and elevated into a position of power for which its inadequacy is as obvious as its danger.

IT is a pity to put this kind of stuff out now—even if it is put out by people unconscious of its incongruity. It is hardly conducive to the nonpartisan spirit the President must hope to arouse in Congress in the special session for the amending of the Neutrality Act and other necessary legislation which he now contemplates. The truth is that, while during the crisis most opponents of Mr. Roosevelt will be glad to forget politics and support him on nationally needed matters, that does not mean that they will abate either their distrust of his domestic policies or opposition to a third term.

EVEN if war comes and we go in—or stay out—the national conventions will be held as usual next summer and the Presidential election in November. Our political processes will not be suspended and there is no reason to think that the tide which has set in against New Dealers and New Dealism will not continue to run. Those who believe Mr. Roosevelt has badly mismanaged the country in a period of peace would be even less willing to have him continue as its head during time of war. Nor will invocation by the New Dealers of that old adage about not swapping horses while crossing a stream ameliorate this feeling. The soundness of that adage depends, first, on the horse, and, second, on the stream.

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

BY VERA BROWN

CHAPTER XVIII

"My girl works at a place called the Inferno. Did you ever hear of it?" the old lady went on.

"Yes, I've heard of it," Mike looked at the lined face. It must have been very beautiful, for even now the eyes were still a deep blue. "Your daughter looks like you?" she asked kindly.

The old woman beamed. "She looks like I used to. She's real beautiful," the mother added complacently. "You should see some of the pictures of herself she sends me. They're as big as this." The old woman stretched out her arms to indicate the size. Mike could visualize the photographs, probably vastly different than those which appeared in front of the Inferno.

"Yes, my girl was always beautiful. I've worried a lot about her. She went down to South America once and married. I never saw him. She left him in Buenos Aires and came home. So, I'm glad things are going so well for her."

Mike sat silent, thinking of the "glamour girl" at the Inferno Cafe whose mother sat here beside her. "You've never been to New York?" she asked.

"No, I'd like to go, but I can't leave her father. He isn't well. We were married young, we went to school together out in Kansas. In Pretty. Did you ever hear of it?"

"You mean the name of the town is Pretty?"

"Yes, the boys used to say our town was rightly named, that my sister and I helped to give it its name." The old lady rambled on. Mike only half heard what she said. Her thoughts were elsewhere. She looked at her watch. It was four thirty. If she walked back, she'd get to the drug store just about in time to meet Carol. The old woman was loath to let her go.

Mike finally left, walking faster now, as she approached the hotel. At home her mother would be getting supper in the stuffy apartment. Jimmie would be restless waiting for the family to come. He should have her yesterday's letter by this time.

At the drug store, Carol was nowhere to be seen. Mike climbed on a stool and bought a soda. That would take up some time. It was after five. Mike hoped Carol would not be late. She did not dare go up to the hotel apartment without her. As Mike finished the last drop of her soda slowly, a familiar voice spoke her name.

"What are you doing here?" It was Dusty. Mike thought fast.

"I came here to get a carton of cigarettes for Handsome." Mike hoped Dusty did not notice her confusion.

"Come on, Carol will probably be waiting for us," he said.

Mike got up slowly. Then to her horror, through the doorway walked Carol. She was beaming, had on an orchid corsage.

"Hello, you two. What is this, a rendezvous?" Carol's pose was perfect. Certainly it was better than Mike's. Dusty glowered at Carol.

"Where have you been?" he demanded.

"Now don't make a scene here, darling. Let's wait till we get up to the suite for the brawl. Come on, you two." She swept them before her.

Mike's cheeks were burning. In the apartment she went straight to her bedroom, closed the door. She could hear Dusty's angry voice, and Carol's cool laughter. To her great relief there was no violent quarrel. Carol had managed to quiet his suspicions. Mike freshened her face, fixed her hair, waited for Handsome's call.

He was late tonight. Maybe he was tired of having her trail along with him all the time. The phone rang. It was almost seven. But when she heard his voice at last, she was ready to weep from sheer nervousness.

"I've found a new place for us to eat, Skipper," he shouted. "Hurry! I'll meet you in the lobby. Shake Dusty and Carol. They'll want to dine in the royal suite."

When Mike came out of her room, the door into the living room of the Lee suite was open. The waiter was just leaving with their dinner order and Dusty was alone. Carol was evidently dressing.

"Aren't you and Handsome going to eat with us?" Dusty asked.

"Not tonight, thanks. Handsome wants to go to a new restaurant he's found."

Dusty laughed. "Bring him back up here, there are some people coming in later." Mike said she would. Dusty got up and came to the door. He stood looking down into Mike's fresh young face. "I like you kid," he said suddenly.

"I'm glad. You and Carol have been so kind to me."

He brushed that aside. "I don't want to see you making any mistakes."

"What do you mean?"

Dusty grinned. "I'm an old hand, Skipper." He used Handsome's pet name for her. "I like you and I like that crazy mug you're engaged to. Don't want to see you get started wrong."

Mike did not understand. She looked up at him uncomprehendingly. He patted her shoulder.

"I won't tell on you this time. But I don't want Carol getting mixed up in any such stuff. Handsome would blame her. You're too nice a kid to two-time anybody. Remember?"

Mike was speechless for a moment.

"I'll remember," she managed.

He gave her a little hug, pushed her out of the door and shut it.

Mike leaned against the wall as she waited for the elevator. So that was what Carol had told Dusty! How did she dare? Sudden anger swept the girl. Her knees were trembling when the elevator door finally opened. The car was full, but Mike squeezed into it.

Only when she met Handsome a few moments later did she realize just how successful her new clothes were.

"You look wonderful." Handsome's voice was flat. "I didn't know you were so beautiful." It was as though he were talking to a stranger, to somebody he had met for the first time. But there was no time for explanations. They went on out to the restaurant, the new "discovery" which Handsome had made down the street. When they faced each other across the little table for two which Handsome chose, he went on:

"Do you know, it's funny, but I think I just always took you for granted."

"What an awful thing to say!" Mike refused to be serious.

"I mean it. I didn't know before you were beautiful. I thought you were just a nice girl."

"Am I not still a nice girl?"

Handsome was silent trying to find an answer.

"You aren't serious, are you?" Mike said.

"I am!" he persisted. "I don't trust beautiful women." He was so naive about it that Mike could not find it in her heart to quarrel with him. She smiled and put out her hand:

"All right, darling, from now on, I'll wear my old clothes." Her voice was so sincere, her smile so genuine that Handsome felt suddenly ashamed.

"I didn't mean it really, Skipper. But you just startled me."

Several times as they were eating, Mike looked up to find Handsome regarding her as though she were a stranger. Had he heard gossip? Each time Mike resolved to tell him about Carol and that afternoon, tell him what Dusty believed. But she hesitated. Mike tried to remember all the things about which Wish had warned her. There were still too more weeks of travel on the road. She must be careful. There must be no quarrels, and Handsome might say something to Dusty.

"Why so thoughtful?" Handsome asked her suddenly.

"Just thinking about home,

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

That rosy glow that comes from having been richly and completely entertained marked all the members of the audience filing out of the Grand Theatre last night after the first showing of Irving Berlin's "Second Fiddle." Having seen so much and enjoyed all one hardly knew what to remember first, what choice morsel in this talent-packed musical to review in the mind for an added thrill to taper off the fun for the night.

You pay your money and take your choice of Sonja Henie romancing with Tyrone Power to the melodies of Irving Berlin's six new songs with singing Rudy Vallee cutting in and Edna May Oliver cutting in and new star Mary Healy and Lyle Talbot and Alan Dinehart all in it too, and Sonja skating her sensational ice tango.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Comedy in the continental manner, smart and sophisticated, Columbia's "Good Girls Go to Paris" is, paradoxically, the most original and completely American laugh-fest of the year. The new film which opened yesterday at the Bristol Theatre, co-stars Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell, the brilliant principals of the sensational "There's Always a Woman."

Alexander Hall, who directed "There's Always a Woman," is also responsible for "Good Girls Go to Paris." Under his smooth, swift-paced guidance, an assortment of completely dissimilar characters move through a completely captivating narrative.

RITZ THEATRE

We don't know why the Jones Family can't take a quiet trip like other people. Take their Hollywood trip for example—"The Jones Family in Hollywood" coming today to the Ritz Theatre—no other family in the world could get into as many predicaments and funny situations as they do in four short days in Movieland! Maybe that's why we love them so.

Charlie Chan flies half-way 'round the world to the playground of beautiful women in his latest film. It's not a divorce but a murderer the inimitable Oriental detective is after in the 20th Century-Fox thriller, "Charlie Chan in Reno," which brings Sidney Toler to the Ritz Theatre today.

BRISTOL METHODIST SHUTS OUT CORNWELLS

In a Church Softball League game Bristol Methodist shut out Cornwallis Methodist 6-0 last evening at Cornwallis. "Hystie" Grimes narrowly missed the hall of fame when Hill placed a single over first base in the third inning. In all the other innings he retired them in order. The hitting of Sutton and "Art" Grimes together with "Bear" Moss and F. Grimes who both drove in 2 runs was the feature. The fielding of the Bristol team was remarkable.

Loses Match Here

Sunday morning on the Elks' court, in a second team match, the Alpha Tennis Club of Langhorne was defeated by a team representing the Bristol Elks Tennis Club.

was Bristol, six matches; Langhorne, one match.

"Bud" Pearson, Wayne Fry and Andrew MacArthur won their singles matches for Bristol in hard-fought three-set encounters. Bradley Ardrey won much easier in two straight sets. Albert Hey was the only singles loser for the home team.

In the two doubles matches, Bristol came out the victor in both. Ralph and Harry Ratcliffe won theirs after three long sets, lasting almost two hours. Wilson Smith and Wayne Fry also had to battle three sets before winning.

J. S. THORN CLUB WILL OPPOSE LANDRETH HERE

Tomorrow evening, at six o'clock, the J. S. Thorn Baseball Club, first half champions of the Philadelphia Industrial League, will play Landreth's Seeds in the final twilight game of this season.

The J. S. Thorne nine, members of the Philadelphia Industrial League, rank with the outstanding clubs in the Philadelphia district. They are currently involved in the final championship series with S. K. F. for the Loop title. In addition to remarkable success against League opposition, the Industrial Leaguers also hold several independent victories over such formidable teams as Kensington of the Philadelphia League and Narberth of the Main Line circuit.

Thorn's lineup consists of well-known players who have seen service in organized baseball, the Philadelphia League and the Eastern Pennsylvania Loop. Every player on the Thorn array is a topnotcher. Tony Lapolla, who takes care of right field, is a former slugger of the Philadelphia Italians. Ed. Bauman, Joe Cannon and Charley Fairburn are the leading hitters of the Eastern Pennsylvania League with Greeby A. A. Fred Deviney is recognized as the leading second baseman in this territory. Lou Forys is the catcher and is a product of the Eastern Shore League, while hurlers Ed. Yuengling and Frank Richardson are from Greeby and Easton, respectively, of the Eastern Penn Loop.

Al Carey will be going after his 15th win of the season for the "Farmers," but Al will have to be in the best of shape to beat this Thorn Club, for they are playing about as fine a brand of ball as any of the industrial clubs in the Philadelphia area.

Ed Yuengling or Frank Richardson will pitch for the visitors with Lou Forys receiving.

As tomorrow night's game is the last of the mid-week contests, it is hoped a large crowd will be on hand.

CECIL PIERCE TO TAKE FLING AT COMPETITION

Cecil Pierce, a dapper little Englishman who has ridden to championships innumerable on tracks abroad, will take a fling at American competition on Labor Day when he rides after the National 100-mile motorcycle crown at Langhorne.

Cecil has been in the United States for the last few months—on vacation. But he has decided to make it a business holiday by riding in a motorcycle race.

What's more it may be his last appearance in this country. Cecil is subject to call for military service and he is anxiously watching the news bulletins on the European situation.

Should war break out Cecil is ready to go—but he's hoping such a thing holds off until after Labor Day, so he can display his skill at manipulating the two-wheel steed before an American crowd.

He is a decided menace to the American contingent and seriously threatens Ed Kretz, Lester Hillish, Teddy Edwards, Woodsie Castonguay and the other topnotchers who have dominated the cycle racing picture in this country.

Pierce has filed his entry and expects to take part in the qualifying trials Saturday, September 3.

More than 150 riders from all parts of the United States and from Canada and Mexico will seek places in the starting field of 35.

Bucks County Playhouse Extends Its Season

The Bucks County Playhouse at New Hope, it was announced today by St. John Terrell, manager of the producing company, will extend its season of professional plays through September.

Originally it was planned to close the professional series on September 9 after the scheduled ten weeks, but the Bucks County Playhouse has proved so popular attracting overflow audiences nightly, that it was decided to extend the season until September 30.

The Bucks County Playhouse, which was made into a modern theatre from a 200-year old grist mill this year with the support of over a hundred Bucks County natives, many of whom are prominent writers living in the county, opened its doors to the public on July 1. Prominent stars from Hollywood and Broadway including Edward Everett Horton, Julie Haydon, Florence McGee, Richard Bennett, Halla Stoddard, Bettina Hall, Sherling Oliver, Jessie Royce Landis, Brawell Fletcher, Dennis King, Thornton Wilder and Martha Scott have been featured during the initial summer.

Next week Marie Wilson, motion picture star, is slated to head the cast in a newly revised version of Anita Loos' farce, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," opening September 4. The schedule for the remainder of September is to be announced shortly.

Chamberlain Tells Commons War Danger Still Exists; Little Change In Situation the Corridor, linking East Prussia and Prussia, to the Reich.

6.—Great Britain and France stand by their guarantees to Poland.

Britain holds that if a four-power conference is held and results in an agreement, then Italy and Germany must accept these guarantees of Poland's independence as unalterable. Premier Mussolini's plan, submitted to the British Cabinet as it Duce kept hammering away at Hitler for a four- or five-point conference, proposed:

1.—Danzig is to be governed by Germany through Albert Forster, Danzig Nazi leader and newly-created "president" of the Free State.

2.—Danzigers are to be given the same "national" rights as Germans.

3.—Germany would have control of Danzig's customs for ten years.

4.—Germany would divide Danzig's port facilities with Poland.

5.—Germany would be given a road across the Corridor.

6.—Britain and France would give up their direct guarantee to Poland, but would guarantee the eventual boundaries of the country to be re-determined in a four-power conference.

Government authorities hoped today that Hitler would speed a reply to the British proposals as presented to Chancellor Hitler in Berlin last night by Sir Neville Henderson, the British ambassador, so that, in his speech before the special session of the House of Commons today, Prime Minister Chamberlain may be able to give the world the answer—peace or war.

By Pierre J. Huss

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
BERLIN, Aug. 29—(INS)—Germany's officially-inspired press came out into the open today with an appeal to Great Britain and France to compel Poland to surrender her Corridor to the sea.

Optimism was obvious in diplomatic circles following the meeting between Chancellor Hitler and Sir Neville Henderson, the British ambassador, who sped back to Germany yesterday after three sessions with the British Cabinet.

Initial impressions in informed German quarters today were that Sir Neville's message was favorable so far as Germany is concerned. Peace, it was felt, is saved provided the British proposals for a settlement leave the door open to negotiations.

Certainly, fighting has been stayed off for a time, for it is stated on reliable authority that Chancellor Hitler will send a written reply to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

The suggestion that the door to negotiations might easily swing wider was put forth today in the Frankfurter Zeitung, which hinted that further exchanges tending towards peace might take place between Hitler and Premier Daladier of France. Said the Zeitung:

"Considering these diplomatic documents, the number of which might easily increase, one is apt to say: Too great a part of the Anglo-French effort seems to concentrate on the renunciation of responsibility for an eventual clash, and placing of the burden on the other side.

"Millions of glowing hearts hope that diplomatic exchanges may end in success, but also we must ask ourselves if success is possible so long as the Western powers are more intent on writing 'white papers' about eventual war guilt, then tackling courageously and energetically things that would lead them towards success.

"We consider it the sacred duty of the British and French to bring the Polish Government back to political reason. Whether that happens or not, that is the only political question of the moment."

Sir Neville Henderson's flying return to Berlin was dramatic. Several hundred watched in Wilhelmstrasse outside Hitler's new chancellery as the British ambassador, with guards presenting arms and drums rolling loudly, brought back the British negative to the Fuehrer's demand for return of the Corridor and Danzig forthwith.

Sir Neville talked with Hitler for a little over an hour. Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop was present, and Marshal Hermann Goering also joined the party for a time.

"I saved a dollar today"

It's a great satisfaction to look over the day's accounts and find you've been able to save money by careful buying.

Knowing where to buy is part of the trick. But knowing how to buy is a bigger part. The wise "business manager" of the home plans her shopping as skillfully as a business man plans to spend a thousand dollars.

Advertisements help greatly, of course. On daily necessities like meats, fruits, vegetables, they show you how to save 2c here, 3c there, adding up to much. But advertisements are just as helpful on larger purchases — furniture, draperies, motor cars, clothing. Followed carefully, advertising saves you money all down the line — helps you run the household more economically — gives the budget a chance to breathe!
